

Gorge Links announces the launch of its multi-feature content and services website

– An integrated business solution, advertising, entertainment and information resource

HOOD RIVER, OR

January 4, 2021

GORGELINKS.com is excited to announce its successful launch. An innovative site, it assembles featured content and services in support of Columbia Gorge communities. The responsive design enhances the visual display on both desktops and smart phones. Its unique platform delivers useful and dynamic content.

Gorge Links points web browsers to businesses, government services, information research, news media and entertaining content. Its business solutions include directory listings and advertising at reasonable costs. It helps business owners better manage publicity and marketing efforts in nearby neighborhoods where it counts.

It is worthy of repeat website visits whether one prefers CorkBored, a virtual cork bulletin board, the Directory of select business listings, Gorge Report with media links, Patootie News with amusing and trivial tidbits, the Research page with county, state and federal research links, or Tiki Publicity. Its menu items are good browser bookmarks.

“Combining technology with practicality, Gorge Links serves as a business directory, entertainment venue, information reference desk and advertising circular for convenience,” said Darin Kirby, a site planner. “The World Wide Web can see it, but Gorge Links revolves in a neighborhood information geographic hierarchy (NIGH). It serves locals and visitors.”

ABOUT THE COLUMBIA GORGE

The Columbia Gorge is in the beautiful Mid-Columbia River region where the river forms a natural border between Oregon and Washington. Gorge Links focuses on the four counties that basically comprise what residents refer to as the “Gorge.” It supports the communities in Hood River and Wasco counties in Oregon and Klickitat and Skamania counties in Washington.
